UK Dive Show 2018

Johnny Clingham

"I never thought it was possible that you could spend two days talking about St Helena but it is certainly possible if you attended the UK Dive Show at the Birmingham NEC in UK" Anthony Thomas the owner of Sub Tropical Adventures and Craig Yon who is the owner of Dive Saint Helena travelled from St Helena last Saturday via Jo burg to London and then onto the NEC show to exhibit their local dive businesses at The St Helena tourism stand.

St Helena was certainly one of the greatest attractions in the Dive destination category at the National Exhibition centre, both operators were nonstop with enquiries from both attendees and exhibitors.

Craig and Anthony were also joined by Johnny Clingham, Garry Robinson along with Andy day who also were able to deliver first hand local knowledge about St Helena diving and what it had to offer potential visitors.

Dive show attendees and tour operators from Europe, Scandinavia and the Middle East were fascinated by what the St Helena had to offer the diving enthusiast.

Many conversations not only engaged interest about diving but also about other possibilities on St Helena. Many tour operators and clients alike are keen to visit St Helena as St Helena offers something different, something new and be spoke to the dive world and the travel industry.

Dive Saint Helena have also been invited to fast track a visit to help market St Helena and the diving with two potential opportunities in rotation to capture this year's whale shark and summer season to enable the sharing of the St Helena marine and diving experience more widely in the community. Craig was put on the spot to do a media promotion to a well-known media brand on St Helena's diving potential, incidentally this was something he hadn't done before.

When ask Anthony said he was really pleased with how the two days had benefited him as a business as he had also exhibited at the dive show in 2015, incidentally Sub Tropical adventures has also been listed as one of the top 25 destinations in the world to visit.

Over the two days the Stand was also visited by saints that lived in the commutable distance of the NEC, we also shared stories with other divers who had previously visited St Helena. Johnny mentioned that we have also learnt and observed many things from the show as well as examples from other destinations similar to St Helena, some of these observations included marketing strategies and portfolio presence in the travel market space.

All of the information captured at this year dive show will be collated into a mini report to feed back into the St Helena for data collection and review.

After two days of nonstop talking and St Helena promotion the St Helena dive show team are completely worn out, but it was certainly a successful event.

WE PLOUGH THE FIELDS AND SCATTER.....

Last Sunday 28 October a gathering of Blue Hill residents, relatives and friends attended the church of St. Helena and the Cross to celebrate their Harvest Festival. Each year, the Anglican churches within the parishes of St. Paul's, St. James' and St. Matthew's on St. Helena, hold their Harvest Festival where parishioners bring gifts to the church to be shared or sold amongst the attending congregation. The events fall in with world-wide traditional Christian festivals and are celebrated accordingly.

Last Sunday, Bishop Elect Fr Dale Bowers led the worship at St. Helena and the Cross where he delivered a true-to-life sermon and spoke of how we must give thanks at Harvest Festivals, but in today's age it is rather hard to give thanks when expense plays a huge part in everyone's lives. He said that possibly, the people of Blue Hill and other districts on the Island do not depend on the land as much as they once did, before technology and modern development changed many of the lifestyles. He added that because of the problems we face today, some people are forced to sin out of desperation, and it becomes very hard to give thanks.

The congregation at Blue Hill presented a substantial collection of fruit, vegetables, eggs and home-made goods for the Harvest celebration, and all goods were sold at the end of the service to supplement Church funds.

The highlight of Sunday's service at St Helena and the Cross was to recognise Lay Minister Mrs Ruth Pridham, who has decided to retire from her duties after 18 years of ministry at the Church. Mrs Pridham was licensed as a Lay Minister within the Cathedral Parish of St Paul's in 2000, which allowed her to perform several duties. She was authorised to instruct and prepare candidates for Holy Baptism and confirmation, as well as preach and assist in the administration of Holy Communion. Mrs Pridham could also officiate in other such Pastoral Duties as the Bishop of St Helena may determine, such as the selection of hymns and the arrangement of readings at services.

The Bishop Elect Fr Dale Bowers made a touching speech about Mrs Pridham's retirement and Mrs Pridham also said a few words about her ministry and gave thanks to the congregation for their support and loyalty over the years. She was then presented with a Certificate of Appreciation for her valuable services to the church. Also in honour of her retirement, everyone present was offered tea with a wonderful variety of cakes and sandwiches at the Church – a perfect ending to an afternoon of giving thanks to God.

Editorial

I ended up with a serious lack of space today and can only write a couple of words about the week that passed. Already we can say that there will be a lot of debate over Sure's new television charges. The substantial price hike might force many people to abandon their TV subscription and go back hiring DVD's instead.

It is also worrying that we are dropping prices on some flights over the summer season. Is this because we can't sell the tickets we have serious problems ahead. Hopefully it is only a short promotional gimmick and the planes are filling up nicely for the rest of the summer season.

The Face of Economic Development

Tammy Williams

Lana Francis is four years old, she lives in Jamestown with her family and attends Reception class at Pilling Primary school, I chose Lana's face to accompany the article because her face is just magical, full of promise, unmarred by age and cynicism and like all children Lana personifies the future.

Lana is the future of St Helena; I wonder if we realize this, can we honestly say hand over heart that everything we do is about establishing a better future for our children? Or does selfishness, corporate greed and arrogance blind us from what should be the purest of objectives?

Lana was born in 2014, beyond Generation Z which is the last generation documented for research, the greatest generation born 1901-1924, the silent generation born between 1925-1945, Baby Boomer 1946-1964, Generation X 1965-1978, and Generation Y 1979-1994 and finally Generation Z 1995-2009, what generation are you?

Children are naturally unabashed and outspoken, they say it like they see it, sometimes their honesty can hurt your feelings, 'Well you are fat' and 'No that dinner did not taste good'

When we grow up, we learn etiquette, we learn that people prefer if you don't make too much of a fuss, we learn to distort the truth, to do favours, not to rock the boat, we say what we don't mean, we keep feathers unruffled, we are afraid to ask in case we look like idiots, we learn 'nice' people get ahead, it's the opinionated and candid that may have a hard time.

Five questions based on the Generation 2030 programs asks' Where are we now? Where are we going? Where do we want to be in the future? How will we get there? How do we know we are on track? Ask these five questions of every generation and marvel at the immense differences, from the eager teenager with the world of technology at his fingertips to his working parents and retired grandparents.

Where is economic development focusing right now? Who is leading? Are the leaders listening? Have we discovered new and exciting ways to do things differently or are we on the same path heading towards stagnation?

There is this long held idea that getting ahead hinges on two things, qualifications plus experience, its' an old fashioned adage that you need to be a certain age to lead an organisation or a department. Around the world managers in their twenties are taking their companies and organisations to new heights, CEO's and directors know that the youthful spark can bring an energy unparalleled and they are reaping the benefits of hiring young people into leadership positions, the generation Z's offer a refreshing twist to the way things are normally done.

Young people encourage us to stop what we're doing and look at things differently, so my next question is upon their return from Colleges and universities where do they go? Are we engaging with our graduates enough so that they genuinely feel they can contribute to the community or do they get the feeling that room is being made grudgingly?

St Helena may be the hardest place in the world to do business, so we need to ensure that we are laying sufficient foundation that will provide an enabling future for those inspiring entrepreneurs who are the youth of today and the leaders of tomorrow.

This week we are celebrating with our cricket team, in the next month the crew of Carpe Diem will leave skippered by James Herne to participate in the Cape Town to St Helena yacht race, these are the faces of economic development with measurable success for the island, what we achieve we achieve together.

Youthful ambition has no limits; their days are not lumbered looking at one more strategy through tired and aged eyes (and I mean this literally) nor with paranoid apprehension, afraid to make a decision because they clearly see the possibilities and go for it.

Let me say I think we have an ego problem on St Helena, some are not willing to let go, others are standing in the way, some don't want to share the glory and others think they know it all, human nature being what it is I think we may find that each of us have something of these traits. Economic development is not just the responsibility of the government or the private sector, it's not just Enterprise St Helena or the tourist office but can we be brave enough to share the responsibility and equally liable when things go wrong? Now there's a question for you.

Let's go back to Lana, she's teachable, she is open to new things, she is on the road to discovery, her mind is free, she accepts that there are others she can learn from, her parents inspire her, her friends make her laugh, her school creates a nurturing environment where she can learn about wonderful things. Do something daring today; spend five minutes with a child.

Haunted House at Rosie's

New Horizons hosted their 8th annual Haunted House on Friday 26th October in conjunction with Rosie's a taste for life.

This year New Horizons only hosted the Haunted House which attracted approximately 250 people who were entertained by 14 actors based around 9 scenes that were co-ordinated by Youth Leader Tina Yon-Stevens which included the originally clown, butcher chop with few new scenes introduced.

People of all ages braved the journey through the Haunted House with many going through more than once.

Serena's Table of Horrors selling a variety of Halloween-themed items such as masks, claws and lights along with the ice cream van and Sweet Nest with their supply of much-enjoyed sugar rush for the children.

A lot of work went into producing the haunted house, where works began on Wednesday 24th October by staff, a few members, helpers of New Horizons and Rosie's staff and by the evening it started to look like the Haunted House.

Later that evening Rosie's had be transformed from the Haunted House back to the cocktail and lounge bar and packed away until next year.

A very big well done is extended once again to the team at New Horizons and all that helped to make this year's Haunted House a great success.

Your Opinion Counts

Dear Editor,

Cardigan in Wales has a similar population size to St Helena but without the stuff and nonsense of a Governorship let alone the quiet jibe about Governors in history – “bad go, worse come”.

I began taking an interest in St Helena after many visits to Ascension where I was a keen hiker. I should add that I am ex-RAF before going into civil life in the B737-200 era if that makes sense – call it the mid-1980's but I am quite retired now.

Governors can be a mixed bag and together with their advisors seem to be drawn to grandeur. They often do jobs for which they are quite unsuited without any of the checks and balances for example that the town of Cardigan in Wales with its democracy enjoys. Just sit back and think of a few past Governors for a moment, the men from the ministries and administrators who collectively have aggregated to themselves duties far beyond their powers. And done so unaccountably. It would be impossible in Cardigan but clearly not in St Helena.

When Shelco first mooted high-value-low volume tourism on the island I should imagine two things happened. First outrage at the Castle that “trade” should have the nerve to have ideas at all, especially if above their station. Good Lord! That makes us look idle and slims down the chances of a knight-hood! Secondly there are always the usual suspects eager to do the master's bidding; a quiet word here and there to suggest that someone or other is not quite gentry, nudge nudge. It is remarkable is it not that so much planning has failed come to fruition? Why? I can quote from a Shelco/ARUP brochure “...[if] a good commercial example is set the island should develop a prosperous and self-sufficient modern economy in which all Saints could share while retaining the qualities which make St Helena special”. That has not come to pass so has no good commercial example has come to light or, Heaven forfend, has someone or other has stifled all meaningful attempts at progress? We are not one whit better off in twenty years, billions spent, a lavish airport and the world's smallest baggage carousel. And no RMS.

Arup has been a towering figure both as the man who founded the civil engineering company and the consulting chartered engineers who have created airports world-wide, great public works [and the Sydney Opera House] in the concern that bears his name. I had not heard of Shelco but the name of Arup is a by-word so it is hard to see how such a ship of enterprise has blown onto the rocks, rudderless and foundered there. Or perhaps I can. I put it to you that the men from the ministry, the diplomats and third-raters “hath done this”. Perhaps as Eve records it “the Serpent beguiled me”. That would require an Eve but what of the Serpent? Is the Serpent the convoluted way St Helena way goes about its business?

If a true enterprise partnership had been created, not necessarily Shelco/Arup but a body of like stature, then the airport could have attracted inward investment, not piecemeal but targeted for island growth. That would have meant risk-sharing. So what have now? We have SHG/DFID/Basil Read, no RMS or anything like a credible service from a nation of sea-goers. And the UK tax-payer regards St Helena as a basket-case, with outstretched hand. It gets worse.

If you take the view as I do that SHG were never going to endorse a private commercial proposal then the first move had to scupper their airport plan. Actually that plan had its merits. It would have had a long “thin” runway, looking out to sea, into the eye of the prevailing winds that would meet the requirements for a heavy take-off. Then for incoming landing aircraft a “wide” runway capable of handling cross-winds would be provided and being solely being intended for arrivals the runway could be shorter. At a stroke Shelco/Arup had avoided the staggering colossal rock-fill that consumed Basil Read's time, labour and budget and ended up in providing a marginal single runway. What was wrong with a dual-purpose V-layout if it avoided massive land-fill? To have gone down that route was tantamount to admission that the might of SHG had been found wanting hence the project was doomed. It gets worse.

If you wanted to spike the guns of the Shelco/Arup proposal you would have to come up with a cunning plan. One way to do this is to change the house rules. Out went an old order and in came a new. The planners now insisted on longer runway end safety areas. Now on the face of it the lay-man would say “Good idea”. But hang on, if you know St Helena at all well it is obvious that there are at the most only two or three possible alignments, none of them very long. If you increase the RESA then the runway necessarily becomes shorter and the permitted take-off weight reduces. Bingo! If the aircraft has neither the range nor the carrying capacity to make a commercial airport or hotel resort viable then the risk-taking entrepreneur johnnies simply fold their tents and walk away. It gets worse.

When the United Nations drew up their recommendations on airport planning they made it clear that that no government could hide behind their skirts. The UN is not a legislative assembly but in aviation it has an advisory role. If needs must hard decisions have to be made by Responsible Sovereign Government and it cannot shirk that duty. In this case SHG had to front up and make decisions. In a flat land with no obstacles and unlimited space you can have 240 metres or more of RESA but you must understand that this can only be gravel, not concrete or tarmac. The bit between the ends is your actual runway. If you insist on disproportionate RESAs then I say again this is at the expense of useable runway. If space is at a premium as it is on St Helena you might think it prudent to surface the whole length, end-to-end and mark it in such a way that the middle bit where you will land normally is evident. Then if somethings goes amiss, tyres burst or whatever at least you can stop on a hard surface and be towed clear. Did the planners do the sensible thing? Did they heck! Basil Read did harden the northern end at their own cost but the southern end is still gravel. No-one expected to use that end. And of course when all the construction plant has gone back to South Africa it is too late. It gets worse.

When an aircraft is too heavy for its own good or if the winds are unpredictable then a runway become unusable. You can try to land in the other direction but if that end begins in gravel with a tail-wind then the pilots may have to use another aircraft altogether, a much lighter one with less fuel and less revenue-carrying passengers. This seems to be where we are at and in all this does it not seem to be perfectly obvious that SHG has been like the awful pianist performing at a concert where a gifted musician in top hat and tails is employed to turn the pages of the music score. The man who could play turns the pages and the man who should turn the pages plays. I could add the invited audience also pays through the nose for the privilege of poor entertainment. You could have had proper engineers, with Boeing and Airbus on hand to advise but oh no, you have here-today-and-gone tomorrow stuffwits [erm fill in the names here] and nothing comes to light. No surprises there.

Moving on to a matter raised by Joe

Terry, we have on St Helena a single runway, unpaved in parts where it would have been sensible to pave throughout made more complex by the need for a skewed approach to avoid the Barn plateau. Joe complains that the Honeywell Smartpath system, so loudly heralded as the best thing since sliced bread, is not in evidence. The take-up of hardware on the ground and in the air [because the two system "halves" have to talk electronically to each other] is disappointing. Simply put the aircraft service provider sees insufficient commercial return for the very few flights operated. Even with 100% reliability of the kit it still falls short of full cat III "blind landing" ability nor is it likely to improve much in the short term. In 2002 I travelled to Norfolk Island on a fact-finding mission about many things including RESAs and the forerunner equipment, the Honeywell Pelorus SLS200 system. I have to say things are not always as they are cracked up to be and yet again [I hate to have to say this] the impression remains that SHG has repeatedly ignored well-placed and well-intentioned advice, almost to spite itself. Think of the piano analogy. Do you really want flit-about civil servants who are never brought to book or real professional pianists at the keyboard? These are circular matters and far from people saying we have to deal with reality, the reality we have to deal with is that at the heart of St Helena Government is a pretty dysfunctional unit. That surely, as the saying goes, is the elephant in the room. To mix metaphors it only takes one person to change the light bulb in the room but THAT light bulb has really got to want to change. I have reams and reams of work on St Helena which the Editor might want to see which shows exactly what can and what cannot go to St Helena/Ascension and in what conditions. It is not too hard to understand. I have lost count of the number of unfeasible ideas bruited about expecting SHG to clamp down on the fantasists, but no, the dream peddlers go unchallenged. We are not children so stop dumbing things down as if only an Einstein can understand. If you go down that path the Serpent really has beguiled you!

Yours faithfully

2018 Agriculture Programme Agricycle—Education & Demonstration Day

An Agricycle day was held on Sunday, 28 October at Sandy Bay which was the third event of the 2018 Agriculture Programme. This event was co-hosted with SHAPE with the main focus of the day being on recycling, demonstration and education. There were demonstrations on different dishes that can be created with a cucumber; recycling of flax, aloe and paper into finished products; converting all organic kitchen waste and garden scraps into compost and video recordings showing sheep sponging and the recycling of wool from sheep to ready-to-sell balls of wool. The highlight of the day was Gary Stevens demonstrating manual shearing of a sheep.

Honourable Russell Yon, chairman of Environmental and Natural Resources Committee, commented: "It was another successful event and it was encouraging to see that this particular event showcased what we can achieve by creating and using recycled products to support our farming and economy and most of all helping St. Helena achieve one of its many goals in becoming sustainable with a greener environment."

Danielle Anthony, Finance & Administration Manager from SHAPE, commented: "It was a successful day for both SHAPE and ESH's Agriculture Programme. There was a warming community spirit throughout the day and great to see a few tourists stop by as well. Our demonstrations and educational displays were a great success and it was amazing to see kids and adults getting involved with our clients on the day. SHAPE had a tremendous amount of support from the community, committee members and staff. I'd like to take this opportunity to sincerely thank all those who contributed on the day and leading up to this event. I anticipate our informative displays on recycling have educated our community and I'd like to encourage everyone to continue recycling any paper, cardboard, plastics and materials and contact SHAPE for us to produce remarkable products."

The 2018 Agriculture Programme initiative is a 'promotion, awareness and engagement' campaign that will run over the course of 2018/19 ending with the grand finale event on Francis Plain. This links heavily to the new Sustainable Economic Development Plan (SEDP) and the National Agricultural Policy (NAP).

Armchair Supporters View by Nick Stevens

I have to confess that I didn't see much of the football last weekend. Saw some of the goals and limited highlights of most of the matches.

Liverpool finished Saturday as leaders of the Premier league collecting 26 points from their opening 10 matches. Despite Klopp not being totally please with the performance, Liverpool score 4 goals to beat Cardiff 4-1.

Cardiff trailed to Salah's sweeping finish before Mane turned a couple of Cardiff defenders and finished past Neil Etheridge. Virgil van Dijk nodded against a post while Adam Lallana was denied by Sean Morrison's headed clearance off the line as the Reds enjoyed 80% possession.

Cardiff pulled a goal back with their first shot on target 13 minutes from time, Callum Paterson steering past Alisson. But substitute Shaqiri restored the two-goal cushion with his first goal for the club and Mane clipped past Etheridge to seal the points.

In other matches on Saturday Brighton beat wolves 1-0 with another goal from Glen Murray; Bournemouth continued their good form as they beat Fulham 3-0 away at Craven Cottage. Newcastle and Southampton two teams who were badly in need of a win could only draw 0-0. Watford beat relegation threaten Huddersfield 3-0 and in the late game Leicester City scored late to earn a point at home against West Ham. This game will however be remembered for the tragedy that happen after the match. Leicester City Chairman Vichai Srivaddhanaprabha died along with two members of his staff, the pilot and a passenger in a helicopter crash outside the King Power Stadium.

Ross Barkley had another outstanding match and got on the score sheet as Chelsea beat Burnley 4-0 in the first match on Sunday.

Crystal Palace came from behind to end Arsenal 11 game winning streak as the two teams drew 2-2 at Selhurst Park. Manchester United held on to a 2-1 scoreline to defeat Everton at home. United went 2-0 up with goals from Pogba and Martial only for Everton to score a penalty from Sigurdsson.

This weekend's fixtures will see United travel to Bournemouth at 12.30 GMT; the 3pm games will see Cardiff play Leicester; Everton host Brighton, Newcastle play at home against Watford, West Ham host Burnley.

The late game on Saturday is the game of the weekend as Liverpool travel to London to play Arsenal. There is also an evening game on Saturday as Wolves play Spurs at home. On Sunday Man City play Southampton at home at 3pm and at 4pm Chelsea host Crystal Palace. Monday night's game is between Huddersfield and Fulham Champion's League returns next week. On Tuesday Spurs play PSV Eindhoven at home at 8pm and Liverpool travel to Red Star Belgrade with the match starting at 5.55pm.

On Wednesday Man City play Shaktar Donetsk at home and United travel to Italy to play Juventus. Both games will kick off at 8pm.

'It has a story to tell': How a descendant of Napoleon's willow tree took root on a Seattle hillside

It sits among the weeds and scrub vegetation just east of Interstate 5 in downtown Seattle, this long-forgotten link to one of history's greatest military leaders.

The descendant of a Napoleon willow tree—it's a genetic clone to one near Napoleon Bonaparte's grave site—hasn't given up despite arduous conditions, decades of vehicle exhaust and even once getting chopped down. The tree grew right back from its roots.

Drivers heading north on I-5, just before the James Street exit sign, can catch a fleeting glimpse of its graceful broad-rounded crown of branches that sweep downward to the ground.

The tree sits on Seattle Housing Authority land, and recently was surrounded by mounds of garbage and needles and syringes. A pallet has been wedged in its trunk, above the ground, for a sleeping platform.

The tree's lineage is believed to go back to the weeping willow that, as legend goes, Napoleon would sit beneath after the French emperor was exiled in 1815 to the far-off island of St. Helena in the South Atlantic. After Napoleon's death in 1821, cuttings from the willow were spread by sailors and those wanting a piece of history.

One was planted in Seattle 135 years ago.

"It's calling to us. It has a story to tell," says Jason Cooper, an archaeologist with the state's Department of Transportation, for whom the I-5 willow has become a passion.

He was at a dinner party when someone happened to mention the existence of a Napoleon willow in Seattle. Cooper couldn't help it.

As a cultural-resources specialist, one of Cooper's jobs is to research whether a highway project might trample on old tribal-burial grounds or anything else of historical value. The more he researched the I-5 willow, the more intrigued he became.

"In the grand scheme, this particular tree has survived by luck and or fate," he says. "This is not a 'save the tree' story. The tree is over 100 years old and so it won't live much longer. I see it as a living memorial."

He now believes it's his mission to get the word out on the origins and history of that willow tree.

"It'll capture the heart of the general public," he says.

International Charity Cycle Ride Raises £100K for St Helena

This week, the SHNT Marine Team received some very exciting news –£100,000 has been raised for St Helena, by the riders of the Blue Marine Foundation (BLUE) charity cycle ride from London to Monaco.

On 26th September, 120 cyclists rolled into the Prince's Palace in Monaco to a royal welcome from HSH Prince Albert II himself, after crossing through eight countries in seven days and covering a distance of over 1,000 kilometres. Riders had just completed BLUE's third annual London to Monaco cycle ride (L2M) and this was the biggest event to date, with riders contending with a steep 45 kilometre climb, 53 tyre punctures and three particularly, formidable days; each covering 200 kilometres.

Supporters and spectators help the racers cool off with sprays of water

The L2M cycle ride engages with riders and sponsors to support BLUE's mission of raising awareness and funds for conservation projects around the world. So far, 2018's ride has raised over a quarter of a million pounds for BLUE's global projects, and the donations are still steadily increasing every day.

This additional £100,000 for St Helena will be spread across a number of Trust Marine Team activities and outputs, including but not limited to, the proposed Community Marine Centre, increasing education and outreach across all four schools, buying specialised research equipment for future projects, building local capacity through training and of course securing a sustainable future for the Trust's Marine Team.

Ultimately, this funding further enables the Team to fulfil its aim of, 'championing and supporting the delivery of St Helena's marine protected area to ensure it makes genuine conservation gains'.

The Queen with Zara Tindall checking the horses before a race at Royal Ascot

Zara Tindall, (daughter of Princess Anne and granddaughter of the Queen) and husband Mike also attended the L2M 2018 ride and before embarking on the first leg of the journey themselves, they described why they had chosen to support BLUE by taking part. Zara explained: "We are really happy to be lending our support to this great charity. Our oceans are constantly under threat and it's for that reason that we are joining the brave cyclists in raising awareness around vital marine conservation projects like BLUE's, so that they can receive the funding and support they need."

His Serene Highness Prince Albert II of Monaco welcomes the fund raising road racers at the end of the Blue Marine London to Monaco cycle race

When asked about which of BLUE's projects had motivated them to get involved in the ride, Mike Tindall answered: "[BLUE's] work in St Helena and Ascension Island, which are teeming with marine life - I think a lot of the time people don't think about it. Everyone talks about wildlife in Africa but it's the same in the sea – there are still very rare species in there that need protecting and looking after."

"Our oceans are fragile, but further damage is avoidable if we put the right protection measures in place. Both myself and Zara believe it's really important to help protect the oceans for our children and future generations to enjoy."

St. Helena's rich and diverse marine flora and fauna, including many species of endemics, found here and nowhere else in the world are without doubt worth protecting for future generations to come. Not only are our waters home to a stunning array of sea life, the surrounding waters also play an important role for several migratory species, such as tuna, hump-back whales, turtles, rays and our iconic whale sharks. The Trust team is now hoping to organise a one day 'tribute' L2M ride, right here on St Helena in September 2019, to advocate for such a fund raising event.

Finally, the Trust Marine Team would like to extend a huge thank you to all of the riders that took part in this year's L2M. The team will soon be asking members of the community for their ideas and hopes for the proposed Marine centre. In addition the Team will also be compiling a short video that will be sent to riders, thanking them for raising such an incredible amount of money for St Helena – so watch this space for the Team and their roving cameras!...

INITIAL POLICE TRAINING WEEK ONE

There were some very nervous faces from students as the Initial Police Training, seven-week course, commenced on Monday, 22 October 2018.

One of the many aspects of being a good Police Officer is the ability to communicate. With this in mind, one of the first tasks for the students was to interview each other and present their findings back to the class. It was very interesting to learn about each student, having come from a variety of backgrounds. Some have previous medical knowledge, electronic experience, and even an understanding of vehicle mechanics.

Once they were feeling a little more settled, students were asked to explain what they thought the role of a Police Officer was. Obvious answers were given such as - arresting people, stopping fights, detecting crime, keeping the peace etc. - however, the one's people sometimes tend to forget is supporting the community and helping the vulnerable and less fortunate in society.

We explored the concept of Policing with the consent of the community and what that meant to them. They now represent the community and are here to serve them.

The students explored how Police make decisions. They looked at the National Decision Model to help them rationalize their thought process. The class had a go at using the model, which caused some raised eyebrows, as sometimes there is no wrong or right answer and it is about justification.

There was a very interesting discussion regarding Human Rights and how important it is that, as Police Officers, they could potentially breach someone's human rights and the implications associated with this.

The students partake in a 'question & answer' session each morning, where they are asked questions on the previous day's lessons.

One of the course Tutors, Learning & Development Sergeant, Mark Coombe, said:

"Students have all been issued uniforms and are starting to look like Police Officers. During the first week we covered topics ranging from 'what is the role of a Police Constable?' to learning about powers of arrest. The students are working hard as they begin to adapt to life in public office and the realisation of the responsibility that the office of Constable brings."

Team St Helena in Botswana

Team St Helena continued their winning streak on Monday's ICC World Twenty20 Africa 'C' Qualifiers which are underway in Botswana, with wins against Malawi in the morning and Lesotho in the afternoon.

Having beaten Swaziland in an afternoon game yesterday, St Helena won the toss and elected to bat and with notable contributions from Andrew Yon and Scott Crowie, St Helena posted 136 in the allotted 20 overs.

Malawi, who had made available an online streaming video for the game started slowly and built a solid innings. Needing 18 of the last over, Malawi fell short by six runs and gave St Helena their second win of the tournament.

Scott Crowie for his contribution of 45 runs and 3 wickets was awarded the Man of the Match Trophy.

A quick lunch and resubmission of team sheets, where Nico Ellick replaced Darrel Leo as Wicket Keeper and Jordi Henry replacing David Young . Jordi had sat out the early match with a lifted fingernail, but David was feeling a slight calf strain.

Obey and Belgrove got the team off to a good start racing to 93 before Belgrove was caught out on 54. St Helena lost two quick wickets (Yon and Francis) before Captain Scott entered the crease, he and Obey built a convincing partnership taking the score to 157, before Obey was also caught out with the score at 157.

Scott with contributions from Johnson and Henry finished the innings 196 for five.

197 was a big ask for Lesotho although they started strongly scoring 10 an over for the first 4 overs, but Team St Helena slowly pegged them back dismissing their batsmen in 17 overs and leaving them 74 runs behind.

Team St Helena slipped to their first defeat in the ICC World Twenty20 Africa Region Qualifiers on Tuesday when they were comprehensively beaten by Botswana by 81 runs.

Botswana won the toss and elected to bat. St Helena however, started brightly, restricting the runs and taking the occasional wicket. With fine performances with the ball by all of the bowlers and restricted the score to 109 in 15 overs. However the final five overs saw Botswana reach 144 for five.

St Helena really struggled to find form and were always on the back foot, at one point being 18 in seven overs. The opening batsmen Obey and Belgrove were failing to find the ball and eventually Belgrove was caught for nine and then wickets steadily fell.

Scott Crowie tops scored for St Helena with 13 as St Helena ended 64 all out.

Having played four games in three days, St Helena were struggling with tired muscles and opening bowler Brendan Leo was forced to sit out with a tight muscle.

The team now has now had a two day break, before playing Mozambique and Namibia today.

"Trick or Treat"

Visitors and residents in Jamestown on Wednesday night were greeted by witches, ghouls, Dracula's, devils, black cats and many Halloween characters shouting trick or treat. Children were seen going from door to door with excitement as their buckets and bags were filled with all goodies. This is a tradition worldwide and St Helena is no exception. One resident complimented "it is so nice to see so many children out this evening, as last year there were hardly any and I thought the tradition was dying out but this year has proven me wrong."

So to all the children, hope you had a great Halloween and the outfits has been packed away until next year.
