HIS MAJESTY KING CHARLES III'S ST HELENA DAY MESSAGE 2025

My wife and I have great pleasure in conveying our warmest congratulations to your Chief Minister and to the people of St Helena on the auspicious occasion of St Helena Day.

Today, I fondly remember the long history which my family shares with the island and its people, having visited St Helena on several occasions through the years. I was particularly delighted to hear how the local community has played a leading role in efforts to protect St Helena's unique biodiversity, notably the Millenium Forest and Cloud Forest projects.

I am particularly moved to witness such remarkable demonstrations of your small island community making a significant difference on issues of global importance.

My wife and I would therefore like to take this special opportunity to send our very best wishes to you all for the year ahead.

Charles R.

Mauritius and UK Chagos Deal Signing Ceremony in Chaos

UK prime minister, Keir Starmer, and Mauritian leader, Navin Ramgoolan were due to attend a virtual signing ceremony yesterday to seal the agreement on the transfer of Chagos Islands sovereignty. The signing ceremony was announced late on Wednesday; in the early hours of Thursday morning the signing was blocked by a High Court judge.

Reuters news agency reported the last-minute court injunction was granted following action by Bernadette Dugasse and Bertrice Pompe, both British nationals who were born in Diego Garcia. They have criticised the deal for excluding Chagossians in any communication. The case was due to be considered on Thursday morning at 1030 BST, according to the court order.

The wider Chagossian diaspora, many of whom live in Britain after being forcibly removed from the Indian Ocean archipelago more than 50 years ago, have said they cannot endorse an agreement they were not consulted on.

In an update to its earlier report the BBC stated, representatives of the Chagossian community have been invited to meet with Stephen Doughty, the minister for Europe, North America and overseas territories, on Thursday morning for discussions on the sovereignty of the territory. The meeting is set to include six representatives from three different Chagossian community groups. "The meeting will be an opportunity to discuss the FCDO's Chagossian projects and the new Chagossian contact group," an email sent to the representatives said, without giving further details.

The BBC did not mention the court injunction in the update, however, having previously excluded Chagossians from consultation the sudden change can easily be associated with the court injunction.

House of Commons Questions and Answers Concerning Saint Helena

From our UK Correspondent

The time-honoured practice of politicians is to claim credit for anything that is going well and suggest that all else is the responsibility of somebody else. As readers will have realised by now, the most common formula of words used by Minister Doughty in providing Written Answers to Written Questions concerning Saint Helena tabled in the House of Commons has been, 'The Saint Helena Government leads on', 'the Saint Helena Government employs', 'The Saint Helena Government sets', 'The Saint Helena Government has responsibility for', or other variations of wording on this theme. And so it is again this week when the question concerning the Governor's 'special responsibility for finance' was finally answered: the question was tabled 8 May, was due for answer by 12 May and finally answered a week later, on 19 May.

'QUESTION: To ask, how the Governor of Saint Helena's special responsibility for finance differs from the role of the Finance Minister.

ANSWER: Each Overseas Territory has a unique constitution. Saint Helena introduced a ministerial form of government in 2021 and the updated constitution provides that Saint Helena ministers have responsibility departments and shall exercise general direction and policy control of that department. The Saint Helena Treasury was one of the departments transferred to a minister. Part 8 of the Constitution, together with the Public Finance Ordinance 2010, sets out roles and responsibilities in how public finances are managed. Under Section 44(1) (f) of the constitution, the Governor has a special responsibility for finance. In practice, day to day responsibility is exercised through Executive Council and as prescribed by subordinate ordinance.'

So what is the answer? How does the Governor's special responsibility for finance differ from the role of the Finance Minister? Or for that matter, the responsibility of Ministers for their Departments, as the answer refers to this. Section 44 provides that in the exercise of his or her special responsibility for finance the Governor is responsible for the conduct of any business of the Government of Saint Helena, 'including the general direction and policy control of any department with respect to the following matters- ...(f) finance.' But, as stated in the Answer, 'ministers have responsibility departments and shall exercise general direction and policy control of that department'; this is as provided in Section 45A of the Constitution. So does ministerial responsibility not extend to departmental finance? Just about all government functions involve expenditure. The Answer states that, 'In practice, day to day responsibility is exercised through Executive Council...'. Which brings us to S 43 (3) of the Constitution, which provides, 'The Governor shall not be obliged to act in accordance with the advice given to him or her by the Executive Council in any case which, in his or her, judgement a matter for which he or she is responsible under section 44.'

As I wrote last week, but we can put it in context now, in their Interim Report (the Final Report has yet to be published) the Governance Review Team stated as follows:

'Recommendation 3 – clarification of special responsibility for finance –

There is a need for clarification on the policy intention behind giving the Governor special responsibility for finance and how this relates to the role of a Minister for Finance.'

We can but hope that they have more success than Andrew Rosindell MP, who tabled the Written Question in these terms.

A reader of the Saint Helena Independent wrote to me this week about this series of Questions and Answers; saying, 'Obviously, the real answers to the questions were avoided,' and asking if there would be any follow up. I understand that Andrew Rosindell will be tabling what are termed 'Pursuant Questions', but none of these has appeared on the House of Commons website as I write.

So, once again: more next week.

The Three Peaks Challenge – Climbing the Highest Peaks in Britain

Ben Nevis, Scotland – Scafell Pike, England – Snowden, Wales

11 hours walking -13 hours driving - about 2 hours sleeping and 3 countries

A Personal Account by a Saint who sweated, succeeded but stays nameless

This is my experience. I'm passing it on because it may be useful if you're ever asked if you want to do the Three Peaks Challenge at a work Christmas party and say yes without much thought or research.

In my head this was going to be the catalyst for a transformation in my fitness and dress size in the 5 months leading up to this challenge. In reality, it hasn't done much to either. The five months soon crept around. Plenty of time turned into no time and the bottom line is that I didn't do the right preparation (in my small defence there are very little hills in Essex). My usual 'everything will be alright on the night' approach quickly turned into everything is not alright. I realised that this was going to be tougher than expected. My pace and fitness was well off what was required. This realisation started from the moment we had our Ant Middleton (former UK Special Forces soldier) style briefing to the regimented boot camp that was about to embark. There is not one minute to spare and there will be no faffing!

Still trying to remain slightly positive; maybe it won't be as bad as it's made out to be starting out on the reassuringly named "Heart Attack Hill". Within minutes I started to fall behind the group. Fortunately, an additional guide was able to stay back with me and with frequent stops made it half way up Ben Nevis, the first peak, in the allotted time. Going at a pace that was above the average pace, the pace required can only be described as super human!

I went through a whole emotional and physical rollercoaster - regret - disappointment - anger - guilt, and from "yes I can" to "no I can't". No amount of positive mental attitude was going to keep me at the pace of the group. My heart pounding, and struggling to catch my breath, to feeling absolutely fine and enjoying the scenery, wondering what was the problem. I had my speech prepared for my colleagues who I felt I had let down at such an early stage in the challenge. But that wasn't needed as all I was met with was encouragement and no judgement, combined with the 'keep going' texts from friends and family. From that moment a different tone was set!

Would I have preferred to have completed it to the summit of each one? Absolutely! Am I any less proud? Maybe a bit. I felt I cheated but I have to tell myself that I readjusted and focussed on what I can do and not what I can't do and just to make the most of it. I affectionately renamed this the 3 half-peaks challenge. Still a challenge for me. but one that was more realistic and achievable without compromising the rest of the group.

From that point on a level of anxiety lifted. I went from hating this challenge to enjoying it and I got so much satisfaction from the following two (half) peaks; Scafell and Snowdon.

10 out of 12 participants completed the full challenge in under the 24 hours - absolutely amazing. I am so chuffed for them and in awe of their physical and mental resilience. I completed my adjusted challenge although I didn't cover the same distance and elevation I did walk for a similar time endured some hairy minibus driving and functioned on a few hours' sleep. Unfortunately, due to a knee injury and without the want of trying and pushing their body to the absolute maximum pain threshold one member was unable to start the last peak.

Wins:

- I didn't die - at points before the challenge. I was actually worried about this.
- I didn't give up
- I climbed half way up and down the 3 peaks
- I did get to the top of Snowdon with my family in my limited training.
- I've learnt a lot about mountain climbing technique and equipment. hydration and nutrition so I am better educated (to make better decisions)
- I didn't have to go to the toilet on the side of the mountain.

We had the most glorious weather and the views were stunning. This could have been a much different experience if it was cold, rainy and poor visibility. I was immersed in the UK's natural beauty - whilst trying to catch my breath.

The Distinguished Gentleman's Ride

Photos Credit: Simon Henry

St Helena joined in for the first time this year. Over 40 eligible motorcycle owners on the island, possessing classic or vintage-styled machines, registered their participation online. They proudly represent St Helena in this international initiative.

The Distinguished Gentleman's Ride is a global motorcycle event raising funds and awareness for prostate cancer research and men's mental health programmes on behalf of the Movember Foundation.

Opened to all genders, The Distinguished Gentleman's Ride was founded in 2012 by Mark Hawwa in Sydney, Australia, and is centred on classic and vintage styled motorcycles. While the event encompasses classic and vintage style, it also welcomes niche custom motorcycle styles such as cafe racers, choppers, scramblers, and more.

The ride provides an outline of dress and behaviour, suggesting riders wear dapper clothing, silk vests, tweed suits and behave courteously, donning not only classic style, but classic manners and carries no entry fee; however, some rides require minimum donation amounts to join.

Since 2012, it's celebrated annually, the Distinguished Gentleman's Ride sees elegantly dressed riders on their distinguished motorcycles take to the streets worldwide, combining their passion for classic motorcycles with a commitment to a crucial cause.

Celebrating our Culture

Culture Month is happening in the month of May on St Helena; celebrating the enjoyment, awareness, revival and promotion of St Helena's cultural traditions and practices.

The St Helena National Trust and St Helena Heritage along with other partners once again this year took on the task to documenting the islands culture and keeping it alive.

This year's theme celebrates and remembers the wide range of creative innovation by St Helenians throughout the years. One of the events organised was a Guided Walk by Henry Thorpe and his niece Ebony to Fairyland Flax Mill on Sunday 18th May. The walk attracted over 70 people of various ages, who enjoyed the leisurely walk and scenic views to the Fairyland Flax Mill and learning more about this 60-year-long industry, which was once the engine of St Helena's economy. The walk was appreciated for being interesting, informative and a lovely relaxing day, learning a little more about our island's heritage.

Myrtle Jane Ashmole

Artist, biologist, lover of nature and starter of things

Myrtle passed away peacefully on 27th April 2025, aged 90, surrounded by nature and her family. She is survived by her husband, Philip Ashmole, their three children, and grandchildren.

Myrtle and Philip Ashmole are synonymous with the study and conservation of St Helena's natural heritage. A pioneering, inseparable partnership and inspirational couple, they brought global attention to the island's unique biodiversity—particularly its rich and often overlooked invertebrate fauna—and made a lasting mark on local and international conservation efforts.

Myrtle was more than a scientist, she was a talented artist, who wove her passion for ecology and art into beautiful linocut prints.

Philip and Myrtle first came to St Helena in 1994–1995, spending six months undertaking extensive research into the island's flora and fauna, with a special focus on invertebrates. This work culminated in the publication of St Helena and Ascension Island: A Natural History (Anthony Nelson, 2000)—a landmark volume that, even 25 years on, remains the cornerstone reference for understanding St Helena's biodiversity. It is a treasure trove of knowledge and ecological insight and a true labour of love.

In their book they described Prosperous Bay Plain as a unique habitat, and a major centre for endemism and in 2003, Philip and Myrtle were invited to investigate the ecology of endemic invertebrates in the eastern arid areas of St Helena, including Prosperous Bay Plain (PBP) as part of the project 'Surveying the Invertebrates of Prosperous Bay Plain' funded by the FCO Environment Fund. Their work involved extensive surveys in the field searching for and capturing invertebrates followed by many long hours sorting and identifying the material collected. Their findings confirmed PBP as a hotspot of endemic diversity, particularly for dryland fauna that fed into the Environmental Impact Assessment for the airport project. One of their most evocative findings was the discovery of nocturnal wolf spiders whose eyes reflected torchlight like scattered jewels across the desert floor. Their samples contributed to the later identification and description of several new species and genera, including the Molearachne sanctaehelenae (gen. et sp. nov.) and Dolocosa joshuai (sp. nov.) - the latter named in recognition of Daryl Joshua, a young Saint with a passion for invertebrate conservation.

Philip and Myrtle returned in 2005, together with Howard Mendel, to study the invertebrates of the Central Peaks and Peak Dale, under the Overseas Territories Environment Programme funded project Protected Area Planning for the Central Peaks, ably supported in the field by Ed Thorpe. They stayed on island for 3 months enabling them to extend their studies of the fauna of the island.

Among other important rediscoveries made by the Ashmoles were the Ammonite Snail (Helenoconcha relicta), a Critically Endangered species thought to be lost, and Turton's Whorl Snail (Nesopupa turtoni), previously known only from fossils.

A number of endemic St Helenian species have been named in their honour—recognition of their dedication and legacy:

Myrtle Ashmole with husband Philip

In 1995, the world's only known eyeless psocid Sphaeropsocopsis myrtleae was found in Ruperts Battery Cave. In the species' description, under etymology, "The species is dedicated to Myrtle Ashmole, who in 1984 suggested studying the fauna of barren volcanic terrain in the Canaries and who participated in all field work on St Helena. Also in 1995, the landhopper Platorchestia ashmoleorum was named after them both - -orum is the genitive plural - meaning the Ashmoles.

Philip and Myrtle's work extended far beyond St Helena, with important contributions to the understanding of biodiversity on other remote islands, including the Azores, Galapagos, and Hawaii. They published widely, including a natural history of Tenerife, and in 1997, a seminal paper on Ascension Island's terrestrial fauna, revealing a far greater number of endemic invertebrates than previously recognised.

Myrtle's deep affection for St Helena, its wildlife, and its people will long be remembered. Her pioneering efforts inspired an interest in and understanding of the importance of these tiny and often overlooked invertebrates, helping to lay the foundation for the island's thriving invertebrate conservation community. Today, St Helena is home to a new generation of passionate, skilled conservationists who in some way will all have been touched by Myrtle's earlier work.

In latter years Philip and Myrtle did much to increase the biodiversity of their part of Scotland, being instrumental in setting up the Carrifran Wildwood project, which was essentially Myrtle's brain-child and which has gone on to successfully 'rewild' 655 Ha of Scottish valley and restored a rich wildlife heritage.

Standing alone in a bare valley, the surviving rowan tree has 750,000 native trees as neighbours, so far, as the valley continues to be restored to native woodland. Called the Carrifran Wildwood, this restoration is located in Moffat on the Scottish Borders.

The Terrestrial and Freshwater Invertebrates of St Helena guidebook, authored by Roger Key, Liza Fowler, and David Pryce, is dedicated "to the future generations of young Saints who take an interest in St Helena's unique invertebrates. Also to Philip and Myrtle Ashmole who first brought the importance of St Helena's invertebrates to the attention of the wider world—for their welcome advice, for allowing us the use of their data and photographs, and for sharing their love and concerns for St Helena, its people, and its wildlife."

Myrtle leaves behind a profound legacy—of science, of inspiration, and of love for the natural world. Submitted by friends on St Helena, Ascension, in the UK and much farther afield.

The Former RMS is Sold Again

Our Royal Mail Ship of fond memory was first sold to MNG, a maritime security company providing 'transfer services'. Regrettably, the old RMS had become a floating armoury serving (supplying weapons of war) to hot spots in the Middle East. There would have been enough work there for the grand old lady until she was consigned to the scrapyards. However, she was sold on to Extreme E, the off-road global racing series using only electric powered SUVs. This was a welcome change. The former RMS had a comprehensive overhaul of just about everything and became the star of the Extreme E show. Sailing from Greenland to South America and over to Saudi Arabia, the former RMS was hailed as the nerve centre of the Extreme E organisation as she carried the cars and equipment from one part of the world to another.

In 2024, the Extreme off-roaders changed from E for electric to H for hydrogen to power the vehicles. Somehow, and for some reason, the old RMS was not needed any more. She was put up for sale again after four seasons supporting the off-road racing series.

The fourth and last season was ended half-way through the racing schedule. In October 2024 she was involved in a promotion event on a Saudi Arabia Island and was registered under the Djibouti flag – a country just across the strait from Yemen.

Reported in January this year as sold to an undisclosed interest, it is also reported by 'ship-spotters' the old RMS is often tracked in the Red Sea and off Saudi Arabia in particular. The assumption is the grand old ship is back to where she was, working for one of the many marine security companies in the Middle East.

Mental Health Fun Day

The Mental Health Fun Day was our first ever event. We learnt many things in the process of hosting it: from legal requirements, connections within the community to necessary in-house preparations.

Thanks go to Rose and Crown for sponsoring us, Rosalie Brown and Tara Murphy (Via Zoom) for being present on the day, John Thompson for having the Ice cream & candy van on site and finally the community; for all the support you have given us in the preparation of the event.

We look forward to working with you all again in the future.

Swindon's St Helena Day Celebrations Last Saturday

This year, the St Helena Association UK introduced an exciting new event into their calendar for the very first time.

The event was the St Helena Day Celebrations that was held at Swindon's Supermarine Rugby Club, a venue already well-known for hosting the Association's annual Winter Christmas Dance.

The celebration took the form of a fun-filled family day out that kicked off around lunchtime on Saturday, the 17th. It was a vibrant showcase of the typical St Helena atmosphere, filled with music by DJ Philly, laughter, field games, stalls, and various other entertainment which was enjoyed by all under the warmth of the Wiltshire sunshine.

The day's programme included a wide variety of children's activities, a bouncy castle, and kids' entertainment that was especially enjoyed by the younger crowd.

One of the highlights inside the main hall in the afternoon was the Master and Little Miss St Helena Children's Pageant, as well as the Mr & Miss St Helena Adult Pageant. In the children's category, judges Miss Megan Peters, Mr Steve Brown, and Mrs Kedell Worboys awarded first prize to Little Miss St Helena Silver Peters, who had travelled from Portsmouth. Master St Helena was won by Kane Cunningham, who attended all the way from Essex.

In the adult category, Miss St Helena was awarded to Miss Holly Lawrence, who shared her vision of taking her cheerleading skills to St Helena. Gary Hartley was crowned Mr St Helena; he is looking forward to visiting the island and spending time with friends from Trap Cott.

The evening highlights included lively dancing to music from the Mojo Function Band and DJ Wayne. One of the most anticipated moments of the night was the Small Lottery Draw.

The winners were 1st Prize (£1,000): Mycle Buckley, 2nd Prize (£750): Master Atley Duncan, 3rd Prize (£500): Dorothy Peters. The judges were Vicky Beal, Robert George, Megan Peters and Fiona Da Silva Adams.

This was the first time the St Helena Association has hosted a family day in Swindon, Wiltshire, one of the UK towns with a strong Saint community.

The event was a resounding success, bringing together many Saints and friends for a great day out. As this was the first time trialling an event of this kind, the St Helena Association would love to hear your feedback. You're invited to get in touch through any of the Association contact channels, your input is valuable and will help shape future events.

The Association also wishes to thank everyone who travelled to attend and support the event, as well as the judges and all the volunteers who generously gave their time to help make the day such a success. They look forward to seeing everyone at the next big event at the Reading Sports August Bank Holiday Weekend..
